A realty deal was consummated this week whereby the Walsh property on Newport avenue, including the store occupied by the De Loma Fountain and the two-story building with apartments and offices upstairs and the Ocean Beach postoffice occupying the street floor, was sold by the Walsh family to William M. The new owner is a retired business man and capitalist who has traveled all over the world and states that he is a firm believer in the progress and great future of Point Loma peninsula and Ocean Beach particularly. His investment this week of many thousand dollars for the Walsh property, as outlined is positive proof of his faith and business acumen. Miss Dell Walsh, who is now visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Walsh in San Diego, will shortly return to San Francisco, where it is reported wedding bells will ring for her this summer. CONSOLIDATION OF CITY AND COUNTY TAX OFFICES

The city council unanimously voted last Monday for the adoption of an ordinance consolidating the offices of property assessment and tax collection. The motion was made by Councilman McMullen and its passage obviates the necessity of calling a special election for an enabling ordinance. Upon approval by Mayor Harry C. Clark, another ordinance providing for a transfer of the duties of the city tax collector to the county must be passed, after which the new law would go into effect within thirty days.

To Mother

Contributed to "The Beach News"

It matters not how many years
How many hours have taken toll,
I still recall her joys and tears,
She was a comfort to my soul.

It matters not how oft I failed,
How near success upon me beams,
My spirit keeps as yet unveild—
She was the Idol of my dreams.

It was a task for her to raise
Her children to be kind and true.
She taught us to seek better ways,
And tell the Truth, the best we knew.

When I recall her Memory Dear,
She kindly calls to me, it seems.
And in my life she's ever near,
To be the Idol of my dreams.

SEAWALL PREDICTED FOR WHOLE OCEAN FRONT

Storm and Butts, contractors for the Mission Beach Seawall, report that work is pushing ahead as fast as possible, and say, they will be ready to start sinking piles by the 12th, and will start to pour the forms for wall and walk about the 20th. They have over one-third of the piles made now, and it will require 7,000 to complete the wall, which will extend nearly the entire length of the beach. Storm and Butts have had about twenty-four years experience in concrete work, and assert the time is not far off when there will be a continous seawall from La Jolla Shores through to San Diego. There are about forty-five men at work now and more will be put on as the work progresses, so states Mr. John Smith one of the office foremen. He also states that Mission Beach is the finest spot from the Atlantic to the Pacific for beach and climate. The contractors expect to finish the seawall by the middle of September, which will be very gratifying news to the residents of the beach.

Development and growth of Burbank last year has kept pace if not increased its lead over other years. In the matter of population, based on the usual methods of computation, this city is declared to be the fastest growing city in the country. The latest estimate of residents is placed at 20,000. This number is arrived at by taking the school attendance, registration of voters, light and water meters and postoffice figures. The census of 1920 shows the population 2900.

Despite the fact that he is doubtful of obtaining a full time federal judge for Sacramento from Congress at the next session, Charles F. Curry, representative of Sacramento, announced that he would attempt to push the legislation through. Curry believes that a separate judge is needed for this district, due to increasing federal court calendars. He asserts, however, that there will probably be no time to consider judicial districts at the next session, but he will introduce his bill to keep it a live issue.

The city of San Francisco is preparing to bid the unprecedented sum of $250,000 or so much thereof as may be necessary to get the Republican national convention of 1928. The Democratic national convention was brought to the Golden Gate in 1920 for something like $100,000 or $125,000. The big pot of California gold which is to be set so tempting before the G. O. P. elephant means either one of two things—either the Republicans are more expensive to handle than the unterrified Democrats, or the cost of holding a national convention has doubled in eight years.

Frank Blakeley, pioneer and large grain operator and canal builder in the vast Tulare Lake area, south of Lemoore, states that he is not farming much this season, but next year is going to be his year. His sons, however, have in a small crop this season—about 4,000 acres of wheat, which is all looking fine. The veteran Blakeley, Sr., who has sown more grain and built more canals in the lake area than any other man, says he is going to go in big in the grain busines there next year, for crops there will be a cinch next season, owing t the fact that the surrounding lands are going to be well irrigated this spring. His big canal on the west side of the lake, and all the other waterways that surround the lake, are in better condition to carry flood-waters than they ever were and he thinks Kings River waters will come down slowly this spring, owing to the hard packing of the snow.

The largest wrecker in the west, which is likewise the only air-controlled or self-propelled wrecker on the Pacific Coast, is the monster Bucyrus railroad crane, located at Roseville. This huge device weighs 258,600 pounds, is guaranteed by its maker to lift at least 160 tons within a radius of seventeen and one-half feet, and has a maximum reach of forty-two feet. Its boom is approximately a yard thick at its widest point, and is made of two heavy steel girders trussed together. This machine, the latest word in mechanical development, protects more territory than any other wrecker on the Southern Pacific lines. Its district includes not only the entire Sacramento division, comprising the roads from Sacramento up to Gerber and the double track over the Sierra Nevada mountains to Sparks, Nev., but also protects the western division to Benicia, and the Stockton division to Stockton.

William Lacondon, who says he hails from Oakland but declines to give his address, has bobbed up at Lodi, San Joaquin county, with a yellowed letter and map which he says will lead direct to $50,000 alleged to be buried on the banks of the Mokelumne River by the late A. G. Theiren. Theiren's two sons arrived at Woodbridge where the board is supposed to be, a year ago and began digging. They said their father on his deathbed gave them a map showing where he buried the gold more than fifty years ago. They employed a steam shovel, but failed to find it. Money exhausted, they left. Others with many kinds of divining rods also vainly tried to locate the gold. Lacondon said he obtained his letter and map from an old prospector named Bowler.

Last year the dairy herd of G. C. Hodgell of Oxnard produced the highest average of both milk and butter fat of any herd tested in Ventura county. The milk average for twenty-five cows was 9017 pounds, and the butter fat average per cow was 339.79 pounds. The herd of Laubacher Brothers, Oxnard, was second, with an average production of 8401 pounds of milk and 314.43 pounds of fat. The herd of Donlon Brothers, also of Oxnard, stood third, with over 100 cows producing 8428 pounds of milk and 302.3 pounds of fat. A Laubacher cow was high individual for the year with a production of 14,245 pounds of milk and 628 pounds of fat. A Donlon cow stood second with a production of 14,345 pounds of milk and 538.9 pounds of fat.

The United States Grand Lodge, Independent Order of Red Men and Daughters of Pocahontas, will assemble in San Francisco in national convention this fall for the first time in twenty-seven years. "In co-operation with Convention and Tourist League, we hope to make this the most successful gathering ever held by our fraternity and will bend every effort to secure a record attendance," declared John V. Oppel of San Francisco, who is one of the high officers in the national organization. "It will be two conclaves, virtually in one. The state grand lodge meets in San Francisco, Friday and Saturday, September 2 and 3, and then the national body will assemble for a three-day session beginning September 5."

Warning that Kerman, Fresno county, will give no quarter to evil doers has been sounded by the Kerman Chamber of Commerce, which is arranging to arm the nightwatchman with a sawed-off shotgun to supplement the side arms he now carries. The use of a sawed-off shotgun is more effective in case the officer is called upon to shoot, as the shot scatters and finds its mark, where poor aim with a revolver might mean an escape for a marauder. The nightwatchman also has a fierce dog that makes the rounds with him. Between the dog and gun, night prowlers at Kerman will be given plenty of trouble, the chamber believes.

California strengthened its position last year as second state in automobile registration, according to a summary of final registration figures for 1926 from every state in the Union. New York, with 1,833,750 motor vehicles registered, increased its lead over California, which closed 1926 with a registration of 1,611,780.

Four hundred trees, approximately and ornamental shrubs were planted at Covina Park on four acres of the property which had hitherto been unimproved. The new section, which now enlarges the park to ten acres, has also been equipped with an overhead irrigating system.

Patrons of the Conejo district, Fresno county, are pointing with pride these days to the handsome brick, tile and concrete schoolhouse recently dedicated and which has taken rank as among one of the most attractive rural schools in Fresno county erected in recent years.

Napoleon Bonaparte
(Part IV)

EUROPE, for the first time in twenty years, could rest in peace and repair its shattered fortunes. Napoleon, who had been the "bogie man" of a whole scared continent, was beaten by sheer force of numbers; disowned by his own people; and safely stowed away on a distant island, where he could annoy no one. Small wonder that there was thanksgiving in Europe!

But the calm was soon broken. Barely ten months after the allies had imprisoned him on Elba, Napoleon escaped. With 1,000 of his "Old Guard" he landed in France, March 1, 1815. The news of his return swept the country like wildfire. The French nation which, a year earlier, had groaned under his yoke, went mad with joy. Louis XVIII had been a stupid, unpopular king. After a quarter century of military glory and endless excitement it had been hard for France to settle down to humdrum peaceful existence. People spoke of Napoleon as an almost immortal hero.

With one accord army and populace greeted their returned emperor with a frenzy of joy. He moved northward prepared for opposition. But he met with none. His journey to Paris was a triumphal march. Soldiers sent to arrest him flocked to his standard.

The gates were everywhere thrown open to the Corsican. Poor old Louis XVIII fled for his life, and Napoleon entered the French capital without striking a blow. In his absence people had forgotten his tyranny and selfishness and the havoc he had wrought. They remembered only his glory, magnetism and genius. He was again their idol.

But the Napoleon who returned from exile was not the same sort of man who had overawed Europe. His early life was beginning to tell on him. He could no longer concentrate his thoughts, make up his mind quickly, nor even keep awake at critical moments. He was living solely on his past fame.

The "Hundred Days" now set in. By modifying some of his former despotism the emperor won over to him those whose memories had at first proved stronger than their enthusiasm. The Royalists crept out of sight and bided their time. But the great body of the empire rallied about their former tyrant, eager to follow him against the whole universe. And they had not long to wait for a chance to prove their devotion. For the allies again rushed to arms, putting an army of 700,000 men into the field. Napoleon could muster barely 200,000 men for active service. Yet, to save France from a second invasion, he hurried his troops into Belgium, where the English, Dutch, Brunswickers, etc., under the duke of Wellington and the Prussians under Marshal Blucher, were encamped.

Napoleon knew Wellington and Blucher would try to unite at Charleroi; so he planned to get there ahead of them, thrash them each in turn and then march eastward, where the Austrian and Russian armies were gathering. The plan was worthy of Napoleon at his best. But its execution showed the pastworthy Corsican at his worst. He beat the first corps of the Prussian army at Ziethen, June 13, and seized Charleroi. Then he sent part of his army, under Ney, against Wellington. The two met at Quatrebras, June 16. After a hard battle Ney was repulsed, but Wellington was forced to fall back on the heights of St. Jean, near the Belgian village of Waterloo. Meantime Napoleon, with the remainder of the French army, met the Prussians, under Blucher, at Ligny and utterly defeated them, killing 12,000. It was the last of the emperor's innumerable brilliant victories. He sent General Grouchy with 33,000 men in pursuit of the flying Prussians (in the wrong direction, as it happened), and himself started after Wellington. The French reached Waterloo late on June 17, 1815. The next day they attacked Wellington's army in one of the most bloody and epoch-making battles ever fought.

Out of all Wellington's great army only 24,000 were English, the rest being Hollanders, Belgians and Germans. Thus the popular impression that Waterloo was won by England is not wholly correct. All day the French attacked, and all day Wellington barely held his own. But at nightfall Blucher and his Prussians (who had eluded stupid Grouchy) came up. The battle had lasted eight and one-half hours. France had lost 31,000 men, the allies 23,000. Napoleon's star had set. His cause was forever lost. Again he abdicated in favor of his son, and threw himself on England's mercy.

By a stroke of diplomacy that is variously described as a necessary measure and as a flagrant breach of trust, the man who for twenty years had defied the whole world was sent to the island of St. Helena, and was kept there under strict guard until in May, 1821, he died of cancer of the stomach.

So perished Napoleon Bonaparte, genius, charlatan, wonder-worker, "holdup man" of Europe—one of the greatest men that ever lived. A man, however, not great enough to realize that selfish ambition and purely personal glory can never bring lasting success.

KNITTED COAT A NECESSITY; GAY SMOCKED PEASANT FROCKS

THE achievement in the knitting arts during the last several years is nothing short of marvelous. Think of knitting machines which design, as they go, patternings which compete in beauty and perfection with rare hand-wrought tapestry design, also rich brocades, and which likewise reproduce with yarn, open lace-work as well as embroidery.

There's the coat in the picture, for instance—it's knitted! All its handsome colorful design worked more beautifully than human hands can do!

ment a wave of enthusiasm for old-world needlecraft is sweeping throughout the realm of fashion. Just now it is the peasant frock plentifully embroidered and muchly be-smocked which is being exploited for spring and summer. You will agree that according to the picture the new smocked dresses are nothing less than adorable.

The fact that they are being made of lovely colorful crepe de chine adds to their enchantment. Of course, the very sheer snow-white cotton voile

A Handsome Knitted Coat.

Even its fur-like collar is made of clipped yarn. No matter how many other coats or wraps one's wardrobe may contain, a long knitted coat should be added to the list.

Time was when the knitted coat was considered merely a sports item. Today they are created for every occasion. As sports and travel coats, those knitted are proving a grand success. Throw the knitted coat carelessly about as you will, and it always comes up uncrushed, unwrinkled and looking none the worse for the experience, wherein it scores one over many a cloth coat.

The knitted coat is considered very smart for general spring wear, especially in beige or any modest suit colorings showing jacquard patternings, sometimes worked in all-over effect or in striped design. These are almost always collared and cuffed with clipped wool, or if not this, then with genuine fur.

But when summer comes! See even now "on the way" knitted coats in aesthetic tones and tints, and most assuredly pure white, for the white ensemble is already forespoken for the near future. They are delightful to wear, and they look charming over dainty summer frocks.

A recent innovation is the wearing of lace-trimmed net collar and cuff sets with the one-piece knit dress.

Been longing to be the proud possessor of a smocked dress? Now's the time to indulge, for at this moment peasant frocks done in vivid cross-stitch and gay smocking such as we have been accustomed to seeing are pretty and very popular, too, but those of pastel-colored crepe de chine are even more attractive if such a thing can be. The crepe de chine or crepe satin ones are indeed the "last word" from styledom.

Not only cross-stitch, but solid embroidery is being used in connection with the smocking. It is the latter which has been lavished on the sleeves and front of the blouse of the frock here pictured.

Stylists are accomplishing some wonderful things in the way of handwork on the quaint peasant frocks now so extremely fashionable. Picture, for instance, a white, flat crepe frock heavily worked in colorful wool embroidery, or conceive of the black-and-white mode achieved through applying cross-stitching in this way and then there are all sorts of decorative schemes carried out with crochet buttons, cords, tassels and other details.

Then also, there is any quantity of fagoting and hand-drawn work being employed in the styling not only of cotton frocks, but also of wool and silk crepe ones.

Your Kidneys
Must Function Properly For You to be Well

LATE hours, rich foods and stimulating drinks are all hard on our kidneys. If their action becomes sluggish, they do not thoroughly cleanse the blood of poisonous wastes.

Such impurities may make one dull, tired and achy, with often a toxic backache, drowsy headaches and dizziness. A common symptom of imperfect kidney function is scanty or burning excretions.

Thousands have learned the virtue of Doan's Pills, stimulant diuretic in these conditions. 50,000 users have publicly recommended Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

50,000 Users Endorse Doan's:

Lambert W. Cox, Westover, Md., says: "Doan's Pills proved their value to me. My kidneys acted sluggishly and the secretions were scant and scalding. There was such a soreness across my back that I couldn't bend or stoop. I was told to use Doan's Pills and shall always be glad that I did. They put me in fine shape."

Marigolds

Marigolds are old-fashioned flowers, but none the less satisfactory in small gardens. They are exceedingly easy to grow and begin to flower in a few weeks from the time the seed is planted. Moreover, they will thrive in rather poor soil, having a tendency to make heavy foliage but to throw few flowers when the ground is rich. The odor of the marigold is not very pleasing, it is true, and they are not to be recommended for house decorations. As bedding plants, however, they are extremely useful.

Many people imagine that Worms or Tapeworm cannot be expelled entirely. A single dose of "Dead Shot" proves that they can. 372 Pearl St., N. Y. Adv.

IN OCEAN BEACH

Business Directory—Alphabetically Arranged
Service for "Strangers Within Our Gates"

OCEAN BEACH is famous as San Diego's greatest residential seaside community and is situated only six miles from the metropolitan district, with which it is connected by fast electric railway service and the paved coast highway. It is the most thriving and populous section of the peerless Point Loma peninsula, with ideal climate, wonderful productive soil and scenery unsurpassed. Wide avenues lead from the heights to the seashore and nearly all streets are paved and sidewalked, with a complete paving program in progress from the bay frontage to beautiful Sunset Cliffs. Ornamental lights adorn the main business section, while modern commercial structures and fine new homes, cottages and bungalow courts are constanly in course of construction. This delightful suburb has exceptionally good schools, churches, civic clubs, mail carrier service and all that makes life really worthwhile as is well attested by the appended list of prominent and progressive business interests:

CALIFORNIA THEATER

"Children of Divorce!" Who? What? Why?

These are some of the things which will be disclosed by Frank Lloyd's latest Paramount picture, "Children of Divorce," at the New California Theatre week starting today. Of the four main characters in Owen Johnson's novel,—Jean Waddington, Kitty Flanders, Ted Larrabee and Prince Ludovico de Sfax,—the first three are literally "children of divorce." Jean and Kitty grow to beautiful womanhood, with the former loving Ted and the latter, a night club habitue.

When Ted proposes, Jean first asks him to prove himself capable of the responsibilities of marriage. He hangs out a shingle and proceeds to do what she demands until—a certain memorable afternoon when he arrives at his office to discover Kitty and a jazzy crowd staging a party. At first, he tries to force them out, but soon joins the circle. Way off into the wee small hours of the morning do they continue.

Here is a drama that will thrill jaded audiences—especially when enacted by a cast that includes Clara Bow, Esther Ralston, (both of them costarred), Gary Cooper, Einar Hanson and Norman Trevor. Take a tip; don't miss it!

On the stage, Fanchon and Marco offer a colorful revue that is unique in originality and arrangement, 'Hoops M'Idea,' featuring Renoff and Renova, famous dancers, and a cast of principals including Natalie Harrison, classic waltz with a huge hoop, Scotty Westen, dancer, the Lovetts, hoop rollers, and Juanita Wray, singer.

Al Lyons nd his Band will be heard in a delightful symphonic program, including the theme song of the stage presentation, which is entitled 'Circles."

BALBOA THEATRE

John Barrymore, of America, and Conrad Veidt, of Germany, each master of motion picture pantomine in his own country, were forced to depend largely on pantomine to convey their meanings to each other during the filming of "The Beloved Rogue", John Barrymore's first United Artists Picture, at the Balboa Theatre for an entire week.

Through special arrangement, the spectacular film of the 28th International Eucharistic Congress will be shown Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday at 1:30 P. M., and also Thursday and Friday Evenings at 7 P. M. The film is eight reels and a magnifcient picture.

The Eucharistic Congress of Chicago has been dubbed the $50,000,000 convention by the merchants of the Windy city. It is estimated that each of the almost 1 Million visitors who journeyed to the city for the five-day sessions spent, at least, $10 per day.

A group of short screen subjects and special organ program by Raymond Godden and Miss Evelyn Boyd are additional features of the exceptional entertainment offered for the week.

FAMOUS SONG COMPOSER PASSES SUDDENLY

Ernest R. Ball, for the past quarter of a century a famous composer of beautiful ballads, was stricken last Tuesday night with a sudden heart attack, dying instantly in the dressing room of a theatre at Santa Ana. Mr. Ball was the author of such well known songs as "Let the Rest of the World Go By," "Mother Machree'," "Boy of Mine," and several others equally as well known. Mr. Ball was a nephew of Mrs. Lillian M. Howe of 4960 Brighton avenue, and a friend of Mrs. Kirk Smith (Katherine) for over twenty-five years. During her professional career Mrs. Smith was the first singer to introduce his "Love Me and the World Is Mine" which song became so popular in later years. The composer's remains have been taken to Cleveland, Ohio, for burial.

THE JAPANESE VALHALLA

Funeral of the Japanese Emperor.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

THE burial of the late emperor of Japan at Asakawa, 30 miles from Tokyo, the "New Capital," called to mind Koyasan, near the Inland sea, not far from the old capital, Kioto. Koyasan grew up when Buddhism was the national religion of Japan, and for centuries was the Japanese Valhalla. In fact, despite the disestablishment it is looked upon as the national interment place by millions.

This greatest graveyard in the empire is in the sacred green grove of cryptomeria crowning the summit of Mount Yoya, in Kishiu, some forty miles east of Osaka, in the heart of the oldest Japan. The site was chosen 11 centuries ago by Kukai, the Tosa priest, best known by his posthumous title of Kobo Daishi, a most conspicuous and interesting figure in early Buddhism.

Kukai had a miraculous birth, an exciting novitiate, and, being sent to China as a government student, he succeeded to the mystic and occult doctrines of the yogi sect, as brought directly to China from India by two Hindu patriarchs and transmitted through seven chosen abbots to himself. Before he left the seat of continental culture and learning, with his sacred books, pictures and articles of temple service, he hurled his mace, or tokko, in air, and, the story goes, it flew through space to land in the branches of a tree on Mount Koya—like the golden torje at Lhassa, which flew through the air from India. Guided to the spot by the celestial radiance streaming from the tokko, Kukai fulfilled his vows of building a temple there, and for the final years of his life he taught the mystic Shingon doctrines, the occult, secret laws, in the mountain-top monastery.

One meets memorials and traditions of Kobo Daishi in every part of Japan, but at Koyasan he is naturally all-pervading and supreme. That forceful person could have known no rest during his brief span of 60 years, for ten men could hardly have built all the temples and the shrines, carved the statues, painted the pictures, planted the sacred flames, or performed all the miracles attributed to him.

After a strenuous life of 60 years, he announced the day and hour of his death. A great conclave of priests assembled, and at the prearranged time the great abbot passed from meditation to trance, and was borne to the waiting tomb, where he sits today, sleeping in the peace of Nirvana, until Maitreya, the future Buddha, shall come. For this reason the Shingon Buddhists have believed that those who lie beside Kobo Daishi at Koyasan shall waken with the sleeping saint, the entranced yogi, and with him pass to the Great Pure Land.

Draws Thousands of Pilgrims.

After the lord abbot had fallen asleep on Koyasan in 838, he was canonized, given the posthumous title of Kobo Daishi (great teacher spreading about the law), and his tomb became a popular place of pilgrimage. One hundred thousand pilgrims visit his mountain-top tomb each year, and ten thousand and more climb the heights on the death anniversary, April 26. Many wait for that day to carry with them the tablets and ashes of those whom they would have translated to the future heaven with the saint, to Jodo, the Pure Land of Perfect Bliss. Even very aged people will insist upon the pilgrimage when they are unable to walk, and are hauled by ropes up the steep paths, with zealous children supporting them, lifting and placing their feet for them, since real merit cannot be acquired if one does not make the ascent on foot.

Every great family in the empire has a monument or cluster of tombstones at Koyasan; the humblest may freely go and get a fragment of a cremated body into the well in the Hall of Bones beside Kobo Daishi's tomb; and ihais or mortuary tablets are deposited by thousands in the temples and monasteries on the mountain summit, where there are morning and evening services in honor of these dead souls.

To found a monastery and mortuary temple on Koyasan was an act of great merit and the height of all religious ambition. It was the chosen asylum of those who would forswear the world, a refuge for retired and abdicated rulers, and its cemetery became the haven of heroes, the abode of saints, a hall of fame. Riches and revenues, lands and treasures, were heaped on the mountain communities through all the ten centuries before the Restoration.

Held sacred for 11 centuries, Koyasan knew only honor and an increasing accumulation of wealth until the Restoration, when, with the downfall of the Shogun and the disestablishment of Buddhism, neglect and impoverishment came to the priestly commune. The lands were taken away, the rice revenue and tribute ceased, visitors and pilgrims were few, and the offerings scant.

The Restoration seemed to have sounded the downfall of the great establishment. Old priests died of discouragement and hardships, some priests returned to their families, others went out to active lay life, and the diminishing company on Koyasan's summit eked out a bare existence. The occasional surreptitous sale of a painting or art object from the enormous store of such gifts accumulating and lying unused for centuries supplied their immediate necessities.

Enthusiastic purchasers boasted so loudly at the capital of treasures of art that suspicion fastened upon Koyasan. An imperial commission was deputed to visit Koyasan, investigate, catalogue, and photograph what remained—all such objects thenceforth to become definite and inalienable "treasures of the empire." It was then that the great fire of 1888 providentially destroyed neglected monasteries and godowns suspected of spoliation.

Preserves Ancient Atmosphere.

The remote, mountain-top monastery and necropolis has best preserved its ancient atmosphere to this garish day of progress; has longest retained its sacredness and seclusion, its atmosphere of old Japan and of true religious calm.

The Kondo, or Golden hall, of Koyassen is one of the most splendid temple buildings in Japan, vast in outline and richly decorated in its interior.

No horse nor wheel nor kago may desecrate this noble forest temple of the dead, and one must walk the sacred ground from the first entrance bridge to Kobo Daishi's tomb.

The stone monuments of the early emperors stand on mounds of earth, the simplest memorials there, while the Shogun Iyemitsu has the most splendid monument on the mountain. The poets and painters of the great ages are all in evidence, and the Lord of the Forty-seven Ronins and the patriotic Ii-Kamon-no-Kami, who opened his country by the treaty with Commodore Perry and lost his life in expiation of the deed, are also there, and great Saigo, with his heroes of the rebellion of 1877, are there too. All the old feudal princes have their sotoba tombstones of Bizen granite, accompanied by stone lanterns that are lighted on memorial and festival days.

The houses of Date of Sendai and Nabeshima of Hizen have small memorial temples in the village near the entrance of the cemetery, with priests' dwelling houses attached, where the members of those families stop when they come for interments and anniversary celebrations, where the tablets are kept and tended. The grave of the traitor Akechi Mitsuhide, a great granite sotoba split by lightning from the onion cap to the great heavy plinth and held in place by wooden braces, is a most eloquent witness of the wrath of the gods and of Kobo Daishi that he should venture there, and arrests the Japanese visitors more than any other monument.

The view as one departs from Koyasan by the Dai Mon, the great south gate, is one of the renowned landscapes of Japan, and not the humblest pilgrim passes on without stopping on the plateau terrace outside the Dai Mon to look out over the descending woody foreground to the narrow valley cutting southward, and on across over all of Kiishiu province and the Kii channel to the long point of Awaji island cutting the Inland sea, with the blue crests of the Sanuki mountains on the horizon.

Why should we be in such desperate haste to succeed and in such desperate enterprises? If a man does not keep pace with his companions, perhaps it is because he hears a different drummer. Let him step to the music which he hears, however measured or far away. It is not important that he should mature as soon as the apple tree or the oak.—Henry David Thoreau.

SOME SANDWICHES

A GROUP of good sandwiches will always be popular for reference in any home.

May-Time Sandwiches.

Work two Neufchatel cheeses with a little thick cream until smooth, add a few drops of green vegetable coloring, mixing until the cheese is a vivid pea-green tint; add one cupful of finely chopped blanched almonds, season with salt and cayenne. Spread thin slices of sandwich bread with mayonnaise dressing, sprinkle with finely minced chives and an equal number of slices with the cheese mixture. Put together in pairs, press edges together, trim and cut into three narrow strips, sprinkle the top side of the sandwiches with paprika. Serve with coffee.

Picnic Sandwiches.

Clean and remove the intestinal veins from fresh or canned shrimp. Chop fine and take one cupful, packed solidly. Marinate with two tablespoonfuls of French dressing and let stand two hours. Now add one-half cupful each of shredded lettuce, water cress, and one-fourth of a cupful of chopped green onions. Add the sifted yolks of three hard-cooked eggs and the finely chopped whites; moisten with mayonnaise and use as a filling on buttered bread.

Sauted Cheese Sandwiches.

Cut white bread into thin slices, remove the crusts and cut into rectangular pieces. Spread thinly with mustard butter. Cut mild cheese into one-eighth-inch slices the same size as the bread; sprinkle with salt, paprika and cayenne. Place a slice of cheese between two slices of the bread and fry in a little hot butter until brown on both sides. Serve hot with a green salad.

Sorority Sandwiches.

Mix thoroughly one-half cupful of finely minced Canton ginger, one-half cupful of stoned and chopped dates, and one-half cupful of chopped pecan meats. Season with salt and moisten with some of the ginger sirup to the consistency for spreading. Spread on buttered brown bread or saltines. Serve with hot cocoa or chocolate.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

HOW IS IT WITH YOU?

THE wild emotional storms that sweep the quick-tempered from their feet, quite often serve as warnings to observant youths inclined to hold their tongues and apply their hearts to wisdom.

But alas! this does not apply to youth as a whole. Many there are who flounder and pant through such disturbances without giving a thought to their meaning. They look upon the torrential outburst with dull indifference.

Although the bridges have been swept away, and the danger signals flash ahead, they plunge into the ruts and splash through the mud and muck heedless of their peril.

Indeed, the greater number continue to yield to hot-headed impulses, shaken up a bit, perhaps, if the truth were told, but still inclined to follow their rash bent.

These hare-brained youths are going to have their fling.

They are going to show their apprehensive fathers and mothers how things are done in this new age; how to "sport" automobiles and flashy clothes. Among their associates of that ilk, they let it be known that they are not counseling counsel from their elders.

There must be no base capitulation to these ancient apostles of precept and principle.

They will blurt out trouble-making words whenever and wherever they please. What do they care for frequent storms that ruffle the serenity between them and their employers!

The world is an open shop filled with good things especially for the young, and all they have to do is to put out their hand and grab what suits them, just as they would crib an apple from their neighbor's orchard when the dog is not looking.

Out of every hundred of these self-willed youngsters, statistics will show you that ninety are heading for the ragged days of failure.

Each year they drop a little lower, strutting in tainted society and put at their wit's end to keep up appearance; still storming as in their earlier days, but with a voice less defiant.

In their calmer mood, in the still of night when alone with their troubled souls, they wonder where the next wind will blow them.

On their foreheads and in their shiftless eyes is written the momentous word, FAILURE! and they know that everybody can read it.

What is Time writing on your countenance?

FOR THE GOOSE—

YOU gotta remember this about mice and men. You can't catch 'em if the trap still carries any trace of the last one.

Don't tell your secrets to a woman that's fond of talkin' any more'n you'd pour good perfume in a cracked bottle.

FOR THE GANDER—

Remember, women stick up their noses at what they get easy and die for what they can't have.

It's cheaper to buy a fish than to catch it, but they're still sellin' paraphernalia for anglin'.

When everything is goin' smooth is the time to be afraid of danger; once it hits you, go to work and lick it without bein' afraid.

A THOUGHT OF MOTHER

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THE world is wide, and men have needs,
Need all their faiths and all their creeds
And all the wisdom of the past
To bring them safely home at last.
And many volumes I have read,
And heard the things the sages said—
And yet I know another way:
A thought of Mother every day.

The world is hard, temptations hide
By every hill and harbor side,
And men have need of something true
To keep them clean and get them through.
But there is little room for sin
In hearts where Mother dwells within,
And this will save the sons who stray:
A thought of Mother every day.

The world is great, and great the strife,
And crowded is the road of life,
And men must hurry who would find
The rainbow with the gold behind.
And yet I hope that men hold fast
To something sweet from out the past—
A gentle hand, a brow of gray,
A thought of Mother every day.

The world is dark; when sins beset,
Ah, yes, when even friends forget,
And when the dream you dream in vain,
One thought will help you bear the pain,
One thought will help to keep you right,
Will keep the lamp of faith alight;
One thought will aid you all the way:
A thought of Mother every day.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

A HAIR OF THE DOG

"A HAIR of the dog that bit you" is in many parts of the country something more than a handy metaphor signifying that that which caused the evil will work the cure. If one will take the trouble to investigate he will be surprised how widespread is still the belief that the evil effects of a dog bite may be cured by applying to the wound "a hair of the dog." And this superstition exists not only in this country but in many others, being as widespread in locality as it is ancient in origin. It has its genesis in the old, old belief in sympathetic magic—the close connection which the ancients conceived to exist between a person and anything closely related to him or constructed in a resemblance of him and still more closely, naturally, between a man and any part of him which might become severed from his person—such as the hair or nails especially, living and growing parts of his bodily structure.

Thus the hair came to be regarded, even when cut off, as still, in reality a fragment of its former wearer and, logically what a man's hair was to a man a dog's hair was to a dog. Now the spital of a man, or of any other animal belongs peculiarly to, in one sense is a part of, the man or other animal which secretes it. Therefore, if bitten by a dog apply to the wound a hair of the said dog and the spital of the dog, with all its properties for evil, will be attracted, naturally, to its homogenous part, the hair, and not injure the alien body into which it has been injected. That's the way the ancients reasoned it out. Modern man does not reason it out at all, but still practices his sympathetic magic with a hair of the dog that bit him.

BIRD DAYS

IN APRIL

In the shady woodland,
Every tree's a town
Where the birds are building
Houses neat and brown.

Chorus:
From leafy bough just o'er us
Tra la la tra la!
Hear the happy chorus
Tra la la tra la!

Blackbirds in the oak trees
Jangle all the day,
For each saucy birdie
Wants his own sweet way.

Chorus:
From leafy bough, etc.

Down there in the alders,
Dressed in gold and black,
Yellow birds are calling
That they're really back

Chorus.

Hear the glad song sparrow
On the hazel spray,
Telling all his neighbors
He is home to stay.

Chorus.

Robins in the elm trees,
All in bright red vests,
Dropping bits of music,
Build their downy nests.

Chorus.

And the bonnie bluebird
From the apple tree
Sings from morn to sunrise
"Home's the place for me."

Chorus.

—Old School Song.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

IN NEARLY every state in the Union the governor has already issued a proclamation like this: "That we possess great wealth in our trees and birds is a matter of common knowledge; but this wealth, like many other blessings which we enjoy, is not always fully appreciated, etc.," and ending, "Now, therefore, I, ——— ———, governor of the state of ———, in accordance with the provisions of the statutes, do hereby designate Friday, April ——, and Friday, October ——, of the present year as ARBOR AND BIRD DAYS, upon which days suitable exercises may be held to accentuate and emphasize the importance of the propagation of trees, shrubs and vines, and the preservation of our native bird life."

Accordingly, all over the land some Friday (the date varies in different states) this month will find the school children singing just such songs as that which heads this article or otherwise taking part in "suitable exercises." So far as the children are concerned, these exercises may or may not "accentuate and emphasize the importance of the propagation of trees, shrubs and vines, and the preservation of our native bird life," but they enter into them with zest, because they offer an opportunity to express the kinship, which all of us feel, with those elements in Nature which are not hedged in and restricted by all the conventions and superficialities of "civilized" human life.

The true Nature lover . . . not the "ain't Nature grand?" person, but the one whom the beauties of Nature make silent, rather than vocal . . . needs no governor's proclamation to make him aware of Arbor and Bird days. To him every April day is Bird day and the best proclamation of that fact is the ecstasy of song which greets him on an April morning. For this is pre-eminently the month of birds as it is the month of wildflowers.

Some of our birds are with us the year round. A walk through the woods in winter, when the bare branches of the trees and the absence of green vegetation tells us that Mother Nature is sleeping, will reveal to us an astonishingly large number of birds, if we take the trouble to make a list of the different species we see. There are the bob white and ruffled grouse, the various species of hawks and owls, the crow, the horned lark, several species of sparrows, finches, the cedar waxwing, the chickadee and the nuthatch, all listed by most ornithologists as "permanent residents," not to mention a varied assortment of winter visitants. The plumage of most of them is somewhat drab and dull, in keeping with the spirit of winter, but it is relieved by such flashes of color as the bright blue of the blue jay and the brilliance of the cardinal's scarlet.

As winter wanes and the first premonitions of the approaching spring are felt, we become aware of the fact that our bird population will soon be increased. Those premonitions come as we hear the first band of wild geese go honking over us some night late in February or early in March. Remember that line from Kipling's, "The Feet of the Young Men" . . . "Who hath lain alone to hear the wild-goose cry?"—and the refrain of that poem

He must go—go—go away from here!
On the other side the world he's overdue.
Send your road is clear before you when the old Spring-fret comes o'er you
And the Red Gods call for you!

If that cry, heard in the night, stirs the gypsy strain in our blood, it is only accentuated when we see in the sky in the daytime the long V-shaped group of honkers or hear the whistle of wings as a flock of wild ducks sweep over our heads. These are the vanguard of the migrating feathered hordes which we know will soon be on their way north. Then we begin to watch for the first robin and the first bluebird (of course in some of the states which really are "northern states" both the robin and the bluebird are permanent residents, but to most people these two are the true harbingers of spring) and—after that the deluge!

Every April day is Bird day! And every day the birds proclaim that spring is really here. The flicker (some call him the yellow hammer, others the high-hole, others the "golden-winged woodpecker") is one of the busiest heralds of the season. During the winter he is not much given to song, but when spring warms his heart he is an altogether different individual. A sort of frenzy possesses him and to the bird lover the flicker's spring song is more beautiful than anything that Mendelssohn ever composed. The same sort of madness strikes his brother, the red-headed woodpecker, and he is not happy until he can find a tin roof upon which to sound his reveille. It's the madness that strikes the red-winged blackbird who seems so full of the spring joy that it pours out of him in an incoherent and jumbled gurgling flood of sound. It hits the kingbird, too, and high up in the air he swoops and swerves, sounding his war cry and looking for a crow or a hawk to put to ignominious flight.

And these are but a few of the birds who add their voices to make the woods and orchards ring. A little later the bird lover will pass the crested flycatcher, the phoebe, the meadowlark, the towhee, the barn swallow and the yellow-billed cuckoo by with scarcely a glance. But when they first arrive they are greeted with the same thrill of delight which one feels at seeing an old friend again. So April is a month of mounting climaxes—each day to look forward to because it means the sight of another returning bird friend. Then late in the month comes the big thrill which makes all others seem tame. It may be when you catch sight of the scarlet tanager's flashing beauty or when courtly Lord Baltimore (Baltimore oriole) first makes his appearance. Or it may be when you hear the song of a robin which doesn't sound exactly like a robin and then, when you get a glimpse of the singer, discover that he is the rose-breasted grosbeak whose notes resemble so closely those of Robin himself.

But it's more likely to be the day when you see the first redstart or Myrtle warbler of the season. For then you realize that the tide of the spring bird migration has almost reached its peak and that soon the warblers in all their rare beauty and difficulty of identification will be here. To the true bird lover there is no thrill so keen as that of seeing and identifying one of these "little gems of the bird world" for the first time.

April days are bird days and because they are that, April is a month to look forward to, a month to enjoy to the utmost while it is with us and a month to look back upon with fondest memory when the heat and dust and stagnation of midsummer comes round again.

Lost Bill Found

An undelivered bill, sent 42 years ago by mail from St. Louis on the river packet St. Genevieve to a small settlement on the Missouri river was returned only a few days ago through an unusual set of circumstances to H. B. Spencer, son of the sender, who is now dead. Since 1885 it had lain on the shelf of a log cabin post office at Red Landing, Mo.

H. M. Edmunds, a friend of Spencer, was on a hunting trip in the vicinity of what had once been Red Rock landing. While tramping through the woods he unexpectedly walked into a clearing in which there were six decaying and deserted log cabins. One was a post office, its dust-laden letter compartments containing undelivered letters, yellow with age. In one of them he found the bill sent by the father of his friend.

The bill, inclosed in a red envelope, smacks of a bygone age. In flowing handwriting it is addressed to C. F. De Lassus, Esq. It asked for payment of $34 for 16 sacks of wheat, shipped by Harlow, Spencer & Co., of St. Louis.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Influence of Spirits

The time will come when it will be proved that the human soul is already, during its life on this earth, in a close and indissoluble connection with the world of spirits, that their world influences ours and impresses it profoundly.—Immanuel Kant.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

by Mary Graham Bonner

SPRING FROLIC

"I haven't told you yet about the spring frolic of the fairies," said Daddy, soon after dinner.

The Maypole Dance.

"It is a late spring frolic, you see.

"This year they had it the night before last.

"For days before this frolic the Fairies had gone flower hunting, and, of course, they found quantities of them.

"Once every year at just about this time — between the spring and the summer, the Fairies have what they call a spring frolic.

"So of every kind there was some specimen, and they knew just how to arrange these flowers.

"They put them all over the fresh green grass, and here and there they scattered young green ferns.

"It made the grass look like a soft carpet of all the prettiest colors in the world.

"Then all was ready for the party.

"And now the fun began.

"First of all, they had the Maypole dance.

"It was really wonderful. There were all the lovely wild flowers which they had gathered, and upon them the moon was shining, and then all the Fairies, so exquisite and so graceful, were dancing around the Maypole.

"It was very beautiful. But, to continue, the Maypole dance is simply one of the many delightful things about their spring frolic.

"After the dance is over, when, of course, the Fairy Queen is proclaimed queen of the May, the sports begin.

"You see, every one feels just like exercise after such fine weather, and they all have all kinds of races and games. Last of all comes the frolic."

"Is that a special game?" asked Nick. "I thought that you just meant the whole party was a frolic, and because it was given in the spring it was called a spring frolic."

"Well, of course," said Daddy, "the whole party is a real spring frolic.

"But they do have a special frolic before the party is over, and that consists of races and hurdle jumping.

Hurdle Jumping.

"They have small hurdles placed every little distance on the race track.

"The race track is covered with flowers, and the hurdles are always covered with flowers also, and then all the Fairies run and jump over this course, while the Fairies who are racing at the time sing jolly songs to help them hurry.

"The fairy who wins this race has the honor of leading the Maypole dance for the following spring frolic, and after the whole party is over the Fairy Queen presents each little fairy with a lovely crown of flowers."

Turned on His Pipe

It was quite dark that evening when Mr. Gregory set out to walk downtown, and he noticed that it was particularly dark beneath the trees standing near a certain house in which lived some friends whom he frequently visited.

As he neared this house, it happened that he lighted his pipe, and, in doing so, incidentally lighted up his face with the glow of the match.

"Hello, Mistah Deggy," called out four-year-old Billy from the porch.

"Why, hello, Billy," answered Mr. Gregory.

"How did you know it was I?"

"Oh, I knew you des' as soon as you turned on your pipe," said Billy.

An Escape

The boy had never seen a circus before, and, awestruck, he was walking around a marquee.

Suddenly one of the clowns lifted up the flap and stepped outside for a little air.

Running to the ticket-taker, the boy shouted, "Hey, mister, yer clown's loose!"—Tit-Bits.

Always a Substitute

Recalling the days of our own happy and innocent childhood, we have often pitied the small boys of the present day, in that the little girls sitting in front of them in school have no pigtails for them to pull occasionally, but perhaps our sympathies are wasted and we suppose even in the most extreme cases of boyish bobs ears could be utilized.—Ohio State Journal.

A CLOSE CALL

Written for "The Beach News" By D. C. CROSBY, Ocean Beach.

We were tramping along the sea coast, (in Nova Scotia) stopping at the little hotels, or if none in reach, we often found shelter in some farm house, and if the vicinity were interesting we would stay a day or two, writing in our diaries whatever we found of interest.

The shore line in many places was indented with little bays where the land was soft enough for the sea to work upon, while other parts were hard rock which resisted the efforts of the great waves, and these parts formed the headlands of different sizes and shapes.

We had put up for the night at the inn of the village, and in the morning Harry said he had a headache, and felt miserable otherwise, and thought he would better remain in bed awhile; said there was nothing I could do for him; was not sick; only felt tired and lazy; he would be all right soon; I would better look the place over alone.

So I started out for a rambling along the cliffs. About two miles away I came to one of those scallops in the coast that was about a quarter of a mile wide, and perhaps half a mile deep from the big sea.

The walls were perpendicular and even, and about one hundred and fifty feet from the top down to the water. There was no sign of beach or bottom below, and I could not guess how deep the water was, but the waves rolled as though there was plenty of it.

It was about one hundred rods from the highway road to the head of this bay, and I turned off to explore it. As I came to the west side of it I saw there was a shelf, or ledge, jutting out three to five feet from the wall; and at the end near me was not very far down.

There are times in the lives of all of us when we are impelled by some unexplained reason to do things that seem foolish to us later, and we do not know why we did it, it was so in this case.

I was alone, some distance from the road, and there was very little travel along there anyway, therefore I should have been cautious, but I yielded to some unseen, unknown impulse that seemed to urge me to walk along that ledge out over the water far below.

I had walked about two hundred yards on the shelf, when I heard a noise behind me, and looking around I saw that a piece of the path I had come over had fallen down into the water below.

The gap was about fifteen feet wide; I was trapped. I could not return; I had no desire to go anyfurther. If I had gone down with the ledge, there would not have been the least chance for my life.

If it took so little to dislodge that piece, why not the piece that I was standing on? I was not sure of a moment respite.

I began to realize my predicament; I hoped that Harry would come to look for me, but as the day wore on and no one appeared, the outlook was not very comforting. Even if he did find me, what could he do?

I knew he must be sick, or he would have made some effort to find me e're this, and this thought did not comfort me either.

So I stood there all day and saw no living thing except the sea gulls that screamed defiance at me as they swooped past, as though resenting my intrusion on their private domain. I was willing they should have it all; it was not fit for any other living things.

As night drew on, a heavy fog came in from the sea outside, and the wind arose as if it were breeding a storm, and it grew very chill.

Besides this there was a mournful moaning in the waves below, and they seemed to rise higher as if trying to reach me, and at the same time there seemed to be voices in the wind that said, "Jump off and end it, for you cannot escape." I thought of Shakespeare's "Tempest" and wondered if Ariel was in a contract with some enemy, and was marshalling the elements to destroy me.

I was dressed in light summer clothing which seemed extra thin in the cold fog, and when about nine o'clock the high wind brought rain. I surely did feel miserable, and it did not help me any to hear those voices continually urging me to let go and end the fight as so many others had done. Besides, I was very tired standing there so long, and for a change I lay down on the narrow ledge, which, as though arranged for the occasion, was narrower here than in most parts.

This rested me some, but the hard side of the rock was on top. The wind howled louder than ever as if trying to roll me off the ledge, and I wondered how long I could hold on. Of course there was no sleep.
